
Food and human services use different response modules and units; their raw efficiencies are not directly comparable.